

FBI Alert Sought For Village in Pa.

PHILADELPHIA, May 20 (UPI)—The residents of Powelton Village, an area here where many political activists reside, say they plan to install an air horn alarm system to alert the neighborhood when FBI agents make one of their many appearances.

To raise money to buy and install the alarm system, a group of residents called East Powelton Village concerned citizens plan to hold a "Your FBI In Action Fair" on June 5.

Residents say since a number of documents were stolen from the FBI office in suburban Media last March 8 you can hardly tell the FBI agents from the Powelton residents without a scorecard.

The neighborhood, near the University of Pennsylvania, has a low crime rate and many residents say they are being harassed by the FBI investigation.

Bob Brand, a Penn graduate student and a spokesman for the concerned citizens, said the fair will feature "assorted memorabilia of the FBI."

Brand said residents have been taking photographs of the FBI agents who have made visits inquiring about their stolen files. The agent's pictures have been tacked up on utility poles in the neighborhood and posted in buildings.

Brand also said there would be an auction of "Xerox copies of Media files and other assorted memorabilia of the FBI." Many copies of the files have been sent to newspapers here and in other cities.
